In the past two years, the party and the state have issued a series of policies to improve the physical fitness of students and improve the physical, human and financial resources needed for the development of school sports, but the effect is not satisfactory. Some indicators of student physical health have not stopped falling and rebounded, and the mechanism system for school sports development is still not sound. Therefore, the prerequisite for realizing the fast and good development of school sports is to implement the school sports policy efficiently and pay close attention to various sports related work.

2. Analysis of the main body of school sports policy implementation governance:

2.1. Policy implementation path analysis

The order of the first path education department is from the State Council to the Ministry of Education to the provincial and municipal education bureaus to large, middle and elementary schools. The second path is from the Ministry of Education to universities directly under the Ministry of Education. The third path is from the State Sports General Administration to the provincial (municipal) Sports General Administration to the provincial (city) sports bureau directly under the sports school. The fourth path is from the State Sports General Administration to Beijing Sport University. It can be seen from the above governance bodies that the implementation of school sports policy is composed of multiple governance bodies. Among them, the administrative staff’s ability to interpret the policy and the enthusiasm for the Implementation of the policy, the school's degree of importance to the policy, and the supervision and management of the policy implementation by the supervisory department all require innovative governance.

In terms of policy formulation, primary and secondary school students involved in sports mainly follow the student physical exercise and physical fitness improvement policies formulated by the Youth Department of the State Sports General Administration. The competent department of the school is the education administrative department, which requires sports-related administrative departments and education administrative departments to actively coordinate and communicate, promote smooth policy formulation and implementation, and provide resource guarantees for policy implementation.

In terms of the content of the policy, the policy concerning the physical health of students is the ultimate executive body of the policy. Students' own willingness to exercise, their own physical fitness, and the coordination between physical education and cultural classes.

2.2. Analysis of governance methods for school sports policy implementation:

The governance method is different from the traditional top-down management approach, forming a two-way interaction. With the diversification of governance entities and diversification of governance methods, a grid-based governance model has gradually formed. With the rapid development of science and technology, the advent of 5G technology, governing information technology and using big data to analyze the effects of policy implementation. The effect of policy implementation is presented in a quantitative way.

Through the reform of the school sports system, optimize the implementation process of school sports policy to make it smoother, reduce the vertical interest game between departments and the horizontal interest game between government departments, the education department pursues the rate of enrollment and academic performance, and the sports department pursues training and Sports performance, so how to better integrate sports into education, forming a integration of sports and education. Increasing incentives and rewards plans to reflect politically. Develop symbolic and admonition tools and punishment tools as standards. In addition, command tools, capacity-building tools, and system building have entered the deep-sea area of reform.

2.4. Analysis of the governance mechanism of school sports policy implementation

The innovation of governance concepts should run through the entire implementation process, opening up a new era of compulsory education reform and development. The macro-plan and micro-plan for the implementation of the governance plan must be implemented in practice. Adhere to the party's overall leadership, implement department responsibilities, strengthen supervision and assessment, and create a good ecology. In the governance structure system, a stable executive body is gradually formed, and standardized implementation steps are gradually formed. The governance content starts with the connotation of school sports policy, involving school sports, physical education, sports training competitions, etc.

3. Bunches of words

Governance innovation is an important measure to deepen education reform and an important guarantee for the implementation of school sports policies. The root of the governance innovation of school sports is the measures taken in the policy implementation process.
